

I travel in my vehicle and that takes me to many areas outside of my home area. I need to be able to find the major cities' traffic and weather in a timely fashion. This does not mean I sit in traffic to try and get to my hotel in bad weather. I pay for a service that I can not receive in any other way than through my radio. The emergency broadcast system enjoys the benefit of using the radio to inform people of a state of emergency, should you enforce one method of information and then attack another form that can also save lives. I feel there is enough use of information warfare without now attacking services that pose no threat to national security, while providing a service to citizens who need this service!
